

Ben Roberson Wins Siemens Internship

The Langston Lab is pleased to announce that Ben Roberson has been named a 2022 Software Data Analytics Intern at Siemens Healthineers AG. There he will employ his technical strengths in object-oriented programming, web technologies, and data analytics. A main objective of his summer employment will be to update a web app for use within the company to visualize software development metrics.

With this exciting new assignment at Siemens, Ben will gain valuable hands-on and professional experience in working with emergent data analysis and visualization tools, serverless and hosted cloud technologies, and cutting-edge web development environments.

Please join us in congratulating Ben on his receipt of this impressive professional opportunity!